Predatory Publishers

Zivich Research Group

Predatory Publishers

Predatory Journals

- Business model is based on mimicking academic journals and charging article processing charges
- These publishers are not real academic journals[1]

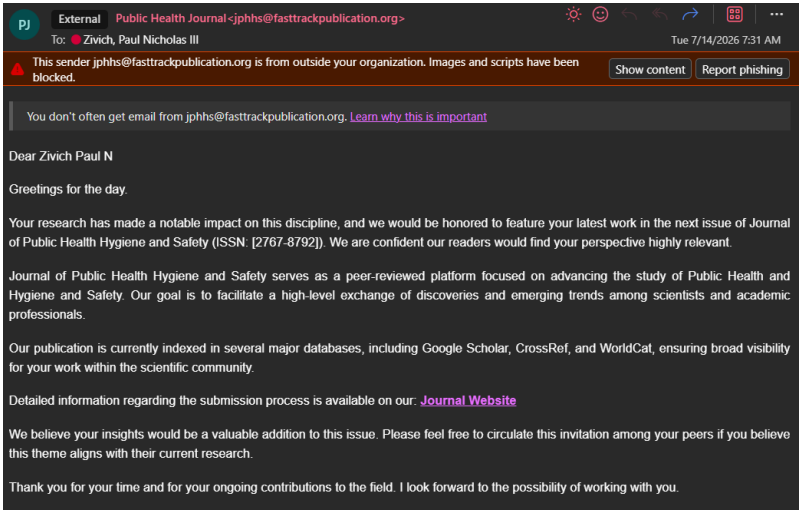

Predatory Conferences

- Same idea, but conferences instead of journals

As you go along in your career, you will come across both

[1] Some real academic journals adopt predatory practices, but that is a different discussion

Dear Zivich Paul N

Greetings for the day.

Your research has made a notable impact on this discipline, and we would be honored to feature your latest work in the next issue of Journal of Public Health Hygiene and Safety (ISSN: [2767-8792]). We are confident our readers would find your perspective highly relevant.

Journal of Public Health Hygiene and Safety serves as a peer-reviewed platform focused on advancing the study of Public Health and Hygiene and Safety. Our goal is to facilitate a high-level exchange of discoveries and emerging trends among scientists and academic professionals.

Our publication is currently indexed in several major databases, including Google Scholar, CrossRef, and WorldCat, ensuring broad visibility for your work within the scientific community.

Detailed information regarding the submission process is available on our: Journal Website

We believe your insights would be a valuable addition to this issue. Please feel free to circulate this invitation among your peers if you believe this theme aligns with their current research.

Thank you for your time and for your ongoing contributions to the field. I look forward to the possibility of working with you.

Warning Signs

- Have not heard of publisher or journal before
- Out-of-place phrasing or formatting
- Rush for submissions or for a special issue
- Journal's focus is outside the subject area you work in

If you are in doubt, you can reach out to a Health Sciences Librarian

- They can do some investigative work about the journal
